MESSAGE FROM JEFF MARBLE, CEO

Over the last 70 years, Frabill has been providing anglers with products that continue to enhance their time on the ice. That has developed a trust in Frabill that continues to grow by consistently engineering gear that performs in winter's harsh conditions.

Continuing on the success of 2010, Frabill is raising the bar even higher. We are excited to introduce new fishing specific apparel that will allow anglers to confidently pursue their passions on the ice. With new and improved shelters, rod & reel combos, and our advertising campaigns, Frabill will help drive more customers to your store and maximize your sales.

Please remember to support the Recreational Boating & Fishing Foundation with their "Take Me Fishing" and Angler's Legacy programs. Your support helps ensure that present and future generations will enjoy our fisheries and a healthy fishing industry. You can find more information on these programs at www.takemefishing.org and www.anglerslegacy.com

We appreciate your partnership and we look forward to growing together in the coming year.

Sincerely,

Jeff Marble

THERMAL SHELTERS

Varying “insulated” ice shelters have been on the market for some time. Some made assertions as to how much heat they retained...in other words...how well they were insulated. As part of our product development process, we wanted to verify the claims of competing units and test how Frabill fared against the competition.

THE TEST

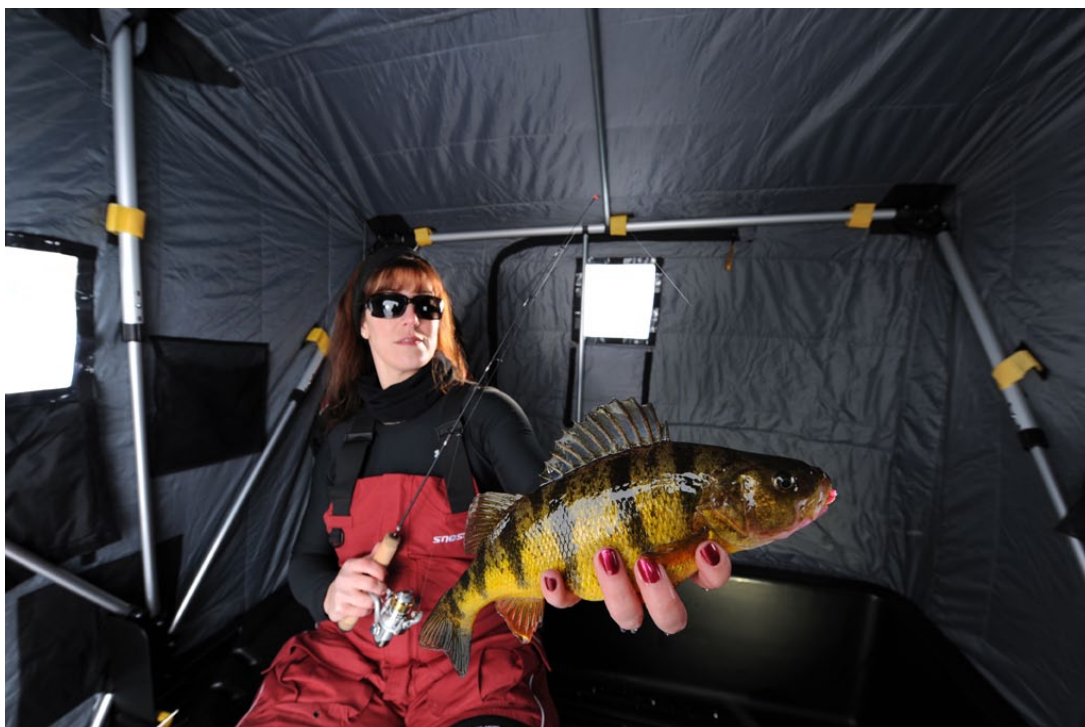

The tests involved two competing units - a thermal cap unit and a fully insulated unit from the same manufacturer. These were tested against the Frabill Thermal Predator and the Frabill Trekker DLX (un-insulated) as a control group.

The shelters were tested on the ice in a typical January ice fishing climate in Northern Minnesota +10F. All variables were kept the same: same heat source, same time of heating and same location - and all models were tested in a head-to-head comparison. Data points were collected at given intervals to observe how quickly each shelter heated, the maximum temperature, and how quickly they cooled once the heat source was discontinued.

THE RESULTS

The Frabill Thermal Predator shelter proved to be the best insulating shelter with an internal temperature of 67 degrees. The two competing units (Thermal Cap and Fully Insulated) held an internal temperature of 46 degrees. These two “insulated” units had a virtually identical performance as the Frabill Trekker DLX at 45 degrees.

The test was repeated several times, each with the results nearly identical. In the end, it was clear that the competing “insulated” models did not retain any more heat than the Frabill Trekker DLX. Frabill’s Thermal Predator drastically out-performed all units providing superior heat retention.

SHELTERS

NEW For 2011

HARD TOP: MAX and Shuttle

Successful anglers rely on boats with integrated storage to keep gear organized and protected. The fundamental “bass boat” design is the benchmark boat chassis regardless of species. The 2012 season will launch a new concept on ice where bass boats meet portable ice shelters.

The Hard Top Series is sure to elevate the game of everyone who wants their gear organized and protected. No other shelter has an integrated rod locker that houses 6-8 combos. The center console is ideal for keeping essential gear ready for immediate needs. The bulk storage hatch allows for quick access to electronics. The roomy base allows for more than ample storage for large, bulky items. The Hard Top Series of Shuttle shelters offers the ability to run and gun and still house all the gear serious ice anglers demand. When old man winter rears his ugly head, the Max Series of shelters offers the ultimate ice fishing platform plus protection from the elements.
